The qualitative research paper is worth 300 points. The paper should include the following sections:	Exemplary	Proficient	Marginal	Unacceptable
Abstract: Discovery & Inquiry (___/15) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Academic justification for study 2. Purpose of study 3. Basic type and method used 4. Results 5. Conclusion length: not to exceed 250 words	All relevant aspects from this section are included. They reflect excellent understanding of content and how this study adds to the literature through a solid, concise synthesis. (15-13)	All relevant aspects from this section are included. They reflect a competent understanding of content and how this study adds to the literature through a solid, concise synthesis. (12)	One or more aspects from this section are missing. Marginal understanding of content and how this study adds to the literature is reflected. (10-11)	Does not adhere to the format required by an abstract. Few of the elements appear in any logical, recognizable manner. (0-9)
Introduction: Content Knowledge (___/15) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. General phenomenon length: 700-900 words	Shows evidence of excellent understanding of the background content that frames the gap, issue, or problem addressed in the paper. Very clear substantiated points through relevant citations. (15-13)	Shows evidence of a competent understanding of the background content that frames the gap, issue, or problem addressed in the paper. Points are proficiently substantiated through citations. (12)	Demonstrates marginal understanding of the background content that frames the gap, issue, or problem addressed in the paper. Points are not substantiated by citations well or minimally so. (10-11)	Reader gains no sense that the writers know what they are talking about. The overview is brief and could have been written without any review of literature. (0-9)

Introduction: Discovery & Inquiry (___/15) 2. Academic justification for study such as the limitations of current literature or existing gaps in literature. 3. Statement of Purpose	Exemplary statement of an issue, gap in literature or problem to be addressed. Then, clearly states the purpose of the study. (15-13)	Competently states an issue, gap in literature or problem to be addressed. Then, states the purpose of the study. (12)	Gives a marginal description of the issue, gap in literature, or problem to be addressed. Alternately, one or more of the other elements is either unclear or missing. (10-11)	Does not address any of the points and leaves the reader unsure of direction of paper. The purpose is not framed well at all. (0-9)
Review of Literature: Content Knowledge (___/30) 1. Synthesize relevant literature that provides a coherent and comprehensive, but focused, background to your study. (This focuses on WHAT people already know about the phenomenon you studied) 2. Substantiate all your major points, with citations. Length: 1800-2200 words	Review evidences an excellent understanding of the details with respect to content. (27-30)	Review evidences a competent understanding of the details with respect to content. (24-26)	Review evidences marginal understanding of the details with respect to content. (21-23)	Review does not successfully indicate a scholarly review nor does it do a good job at framing your study with respect to your content. (0-20).
Review of Literature: Discovery & Inquiry (___/15)	Reader has a sense that you are exceptionally well read in the subject and have brought together the most relevant content information to frame your study in a scholarly manner. (13-15)	Reader has a sense that you are proficiently well read in the subject and have brought together relevant content information to frame your study in a scholarly manner. (12)	Reader has a sense that you have not read much and are bringing in personal opinion and knowledge to frame your study and/or is a simple listing and summary of studies. (10-11)	Reader has a sense that you have put forth very little effort to gain prior knowledge. (9-0)

Methodology: Numeracy (___/30) <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Explain why qualitative methodology and your particular form of data collection (semi-structured interviews, participant-observation, content analysis, case study, etc) was chosen.2. Explain methods for selecting participants and describe any criteria you may have had for participants or briefly describe who you had.3. Explain how you conducted the data collection. Describe ethical considerations.4. Provide an in-depth description of the data analysis process that includes a clear description of coding procedures.5. Briefly describe your role as a researcher and your personal perspective and position (reflexivity- addresses issues of trustworthiness). Length: 600-800 words	All 4 points are addressed exceptionally well. (27-30)	All four points are addressed proficiently, but some are lacking in depth. (24-26)	One or more points may be missing or not described well at all while other points may be competently addressed. (21-23)	Most elements are missing. The descriptions are brief and unhelpful. The reader has no confidence that the researchers conducted a scholarly study. (0-20)

Findings: Critical Thinking (___/60) <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Thematically organize important findings from your study. 2. Revisit the literature as you present your findings, stating in what ways your findings either support, partially, support or do not support previous findings. 3. Findings are supported with specific, relevant evidence- quotes and other observations. Length: 2200-3100 words	Successful application of theoretical lens and content in the lit review to critically analyze and make sense of the findings. All findings are presented thematically in an exceptional manner. Specific examples illustrate the points being made very well. (60-54)	Proficient application of theoretical lens and content in the lit review to critically analyze and make sense of the findings. All findings are presented thematically in a competent manner. Specific examples illustrate the points being made well. (53-48)	Either marginally applies theoretical lens and content in the lit review to critically analyze and make sense of the findings or sometimes fails to connect findings to prior literature. Few findings are presented in a thematic manner. Examples are either too general or lacking clarity. (42-47)	Fails to analyze findings through theoretical lens and/or fails to connect findings to literature. It is simply a summary of what you found. No specific evidence to support your statements. (0-41)

Remind reader of your original research question. 2. Summarize key findings. 3. Describe overall contribution the study makes to existing knowledge or understanding e.g. consider the findings in relation to relevant research-based literature. 4. Identify new areas where research is necessary, noting the limitations of your study Length: 1000-1500 words	Exceptionally makes sense of findings by insightful, careful attention to all four points. (27-30)	Competently makes sense of findings by proficient attention to all four points. (24-26)	Marginally makes sense of findings. Some of the points are missing or not adequately addressed. Reader does not get what your research adds, nor why it is important. (21-23)	Does not make sense of findings, but rather simply summarizes what you said in previous section. Reader has limited or no sense of how this relates to the ‘big picture’ and why it is important. (0-20)
