Leading and Working in a Social Justice Framework

Presenter: Office of Multicultural Affairs, Seattle University

Date: Friday, April 20, 2012

Time: 8am to 12pm

Location: Seattle University, Lemieux Library, 122 Boeing Room

This interactive workshop facilitated by Seattle University's Office of Multicultural Affairs will focus on creating an organizational culture with a sustainable commitment to social justice. If you want to advance conversation around issues of diversity and social justice in your workplace, join us to learn more about:

- Understanding systems of privilege and oppression that operate in groups and organizations.
- Anticipating and addressing challenging organizational dynamics.
- Navigating difficult dialogues and courageous conversations.
- Developing an action plan for social justice integration.

Instructor Bio: Monica Nixon joined the Office of Multicultural Affairs as Director in summer 2006, building on a decade of experience in higher education at the University of Virginia as Assistant to the Executive Vice President and Assistant Director of Orientation and New Student Programs; at the University of Puget Sound as Associate Director for Student Services; and at Colgate University as director of the ALANA Cultural Center. She has a master's degree in Counseling and a bachelor's degree in English from the University of Virginia. Monica is committed to achieving social justice and to making more complex the ways in which students, faculty, and staff conceptualize multiculturalism. Her research interests focus on intersections of racial and sexual identity development and the experiences and development of multiracial college students.
