

Seattle University Student Learning Outcomes

Seattle University graduate students should be able to:

1. Demonstrate mastery of the competencies required in their profession or field.
2. Produce effective written work deemed publishable in appropriate contexts.
3. Make effective oral presentations adapted to specific audiences.
4. Demonstrate a worldview informed by multicultural and global perspectives
5. Demonstrate effective leadership and team skills needed to convert goals to action.
6. Recognize and address moral and ethical challenges within their profession or field.
7. Understand and appreciate the Jesuit/Catholic linking of faith and justice.
8. Assess own levels of commitment to community service and to a just world.

Articulate a personal and professional growth plan in which continued learning is a key component.

Graduate Students
Department/Program College of Nursing – MSN Program - 2007 Student Learning Outcomes	Seattle University's Student Learning Outcomes
Students should be able to:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Synthesize knowledge from nursing and related disciplines for advanced nursing practice.	X	X	X
Utilize problem solving strategies to provide care and to enable groups of clients to manage and cope with alterations in health and to attain higher levels of wellness.	X
Embody values essential to advanced nursing practice				X		X	X
Evaluate one's beliefs, values and ways of knowing to foster personal growth and professional practice.				X		X			X
Analyze health care systems and policies that influence health care for vulnerable populations.					X
Practice advanced nursing roles in collaboration with clients, health professionals, and community organizations to ensure quality care.	X				X
Advance the health of vulnerable populations through scholarship, leadership, and delivery of quality nursing care.		X	X	X	X				