

Lucas Trout is a psychotherapist and post-graduate research fellow in the Department of Health Promotion and Policy at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. A former firefighter, search and rescuer, and wilderness therapy guide, he now works with an interdisciplinary team to conduct participatory action research in the Alaskan Arctic centered on indigenous youth resilience and suicide prevention. He lives between Northwest Alaska and the Wyoming Rockies with his partner and dog.

Email: luctrout@gmail.com