The event, co-sponsored by United Way of King County and SU's Wednesday, October 5, a month before the midterm elections. Community organizer and voting rights advocate LaTosha Brown, co-founder of Black Voters Matter, will speak at Seattle University on October 5, 2022. Brown is the founder of Black Voters Matter, a national organization dedicated to ensuring that every vote counts and every voice is heard. She has been a leading voice in the fight for expanded voting rights and has worked to increase voter turnout among historically disenfranchised communities. Her presentation will focus on the importance of voting and the role of community organizers in expanding voter access.

This year's event, back in person at Meydenbauer Center on September 26, 2022. It's a Record-Setting Year for the Costco Scholars Program. It's a record-setting year for the Costco Scholars Program, with 28 students being awarded scholarships of $2,000 each.
